Growth of the University of Missouri

The extraordinary growth of the state university, at Columbia, should be a source of gratification to every citizen. Since Oct., 1901, when the attendance first reached 1000, the enrollment at this great institution of learning has more than doubled. In the same period in which the enrollment of the university of Michigan has increased 25 per cent, the university of Illinois 50 per cent, the university of Arkansas 25 per cent, the university of Nebraska 30 per cent, the university of Iowa 5 per cent, and the university of Kansas 40 per cent, the enrollment of the university of Missouri has increased 107 per cent. In rapid development no state university can compare with it. A number of facts explain this growth. No tuition is charge, a great advantage offered by the university over eastern institutions and many colleges. The expense of living is lower than they are at any great center of learning in the union and at the same time the equipment and instruction are of the very highest order. There are now thirty large buildings of pressed brick or stone, twenty-three at Columbia and seven at the School of Mines at Rolla. More than 127,000 volumes and pamphlets are accessible to students in the various general and special libraries. The value of books, grounds, buildings and equipment is more than $2,000,000. Instruction is given in almost every branch of human knowledge. There are ten departments: Academic or Liberal Arts, Missouri Teachers' College, College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, Department of Law, Department of Medicine, School of Engineering, Agricultural Experiment Station, Missouri State Military School, Graduate Department, and Department of Mines and Metallurgy at Rolla.

We learn from the Salisbury Press-Spectator that Mrs. Benjamin Hayes of south of Salisbury, has grown an immense tomato which she will enter in a contest for a $50 prize. The tomato is of what is known as the Earliest Peach variety, and the seed was furnished by the Burpee Seed Co., of Philadelphia, who are offering a prize of $50 for the largest tomato grown in each state. Mrs. Hayes' tomato measured 14 1-2 inches in circumference and weighs one pound and one-half ounce. Carlestead Sisters photographed it Tuesday, and this photograph and the certified measurements and weight will be sent to the firm at Philadelphia. The Press-Spectator hopes that Mrs. Hayes will be successful in the competition, for the honor, as well as the remunerative prize, will be a source of pride, not only to her but to the people of Chariton county as well.
